

NATURAL VENEER

VENEER IS WOOD IN ITS MOST ATTRACTIVE FORM.

Experts call veneers the finest things that can be produced from wood. In fact, veneers are the most economical way of using wood.

What makes veneers so valuable is the fact that it goes back to the time of the Egyptians who saw merit in the value of wood and thus invented ways of slicing the logs into the thinnest possible boards. Today this legacy has been developed further by using modern technology, expert production processes and excellent craftsmanship.

Durian is proud to be at the forefront by constantly producing unique veneer designs, thus allowing our veneer to be the choice of various designer pieces of furniture in the retail segment. Today we can boast of sourcing 150+ species of wood from around the world.

Come and discover veneers handcrafted at Durian.

VENEER GRAINS

Horizontal |↔

Vertical |↑↓

Texture: Figured | Quarter | Knotty | Burl | Crown | Pommele | Cluster | Crotch | Quilted | Fiddled | Bark

Shape: ↑ Vertical Grain | ↔ Horizontal Grain

A tangent cut across the growth rings is what produces a crown cut veneer with a pattern that is characterized by straight grain intermixed with crowns that represent cathedral arcs.

Crown | 🏰

Cut into quarters, this wood is then sliced. This technique bisects annual growth rings in a straight grain or ribbon-stripped (Mahogany) appearance. Low-yielding, this veneer is more expensive.

Quarter | 📐

The surface effect of grain and colour patterns produced by the natural patterns of growth or biological “defects” in the tree is what gives birth to Figure. Logs with strong, consistent figures are often priced higher.

Figured | 🌳

Unlike the rest, this veneer is typically of a white pine species with an exception of the large sound knots that are desired for a rustic effect. A common characteristic is color variance between the flitches. It comes with beautiful defects such as pitch pockets and other natural grain anomalies.

Knotty | 🪵

A close pattern of many small eyelike features surrounded by distorted grain is how Burl appears.

Burl | ●

The intersection of a branch with the main section which causes a grain pattern is known as a crotch. The cross section of this leads as a beautiful section in the grain.

Crotch | 🌳

A larger version of pommele or blister where the blister is more elongated and chaotic which gives it a raised 3D effect.

Quilted | 🧩

Logs that are partially buried undergo rotary slicing. This gives birth to clusters. They are a group of burl-like formations in different sizes.

Cluster | ✨

This exotic wood veneer has medium to dark reddish-brown color with a "blistered and bubbled" figure. Translated into English as apple, it is meant to describe the apple-shaped effect of the figure.

Pommele |

With an embossed and glossy feel, the look of this veneer is the effect of the machine cut. The end result is a classy and sophisticated sheet of veneer.

Bark |

This prized veneer was used in the manufacture of violins, hence its name. It has a distinctive stripe, which usually runs at right angles to the grain. It was favoured during the 18th century with mahogany and stained sycamore.
